

Anna's Story

I am Anna Tai; I work in the church as a missionary. I moved from Taiwan to the United States to live in Northern California, because in California many people speak Chinese, and so I thought that speaking English is not important. In 2002 I moved to Socorro, New Mexico; originally I just wanted to live there short term.

However, the American church would not let me return to California. Now I want to have good conversation with Americans in English. Three years later, and I had to believe that English is very important, so I began looking for an English tutor. But the tutor could not teach me in less than a few months.

Since I had missed many classes because of traveling for work, where I spoke about my missionary work, I was unable to find another tutor.

So I come here to learn English. I speak poor English, Please have patience to listen to my story.

My job is to introduce Jesus to the Chinese Students, bring them into the church and teach them the Bible. Sometimes I have to counsel some students and make daily visits to different students, and often invite them to my home for dinner.
